Supporting vulnerable adults with epilepsy and how to administer buccal midazolam safely

Epilepsy Awareness Ltd guarantee to bring you up-to-speed with the latest legislation, care and treatment options for adults with epilepsy. We'll also guide you through the safe administration of buccal midazolam.

With lots of room for practical demonstrations and discussion, you'll come away with the skills and confidence you need to give the very best level of care; and exceed regulatory requirements.

Delivered by Sally Gomersall, who has lived with epilepsy for most of her life, this four-hour course addresses the key issues, including:

- The epilepsies and types of seizures
- NHS epilepsy services and best clinical practice
- The facts about a seizure – what does it really feel like, before, during and after?
- Managing seizures safely and with dignity
- Status epilepticus and medical emergencies
- Safe administration of buccal midazolam and a look at the associated risks
- Emergency epilepsy care plans
- Recording and monitoring epileptic seizures
- Drug treatment and non-drug treatments
- Safety, risk and reducing mortality associated with seizures

We answer your questions, including:

- What is living a life with epilepsy really like? We separate the fact from the fiction.
- How can you demonstrate competence in the safe administration of midazolam.
- How can you help vulnerable adults maximise the clinical expertise locally and nationally for their epilepsy and seizures?
- Where can families and carers go for support? What can we do to support and empower them?
